Ad Text A Fort Worth man broke into the State Capitol in Austin to deface a Civil War-era portrait

Apparently, the man's main goal was to destroy the portrait of former Texas Governor Fletcher Stockdale. The man was arrested right in the Capitol and charged with felony burglary and criminal mischief.

It is not clear for now if his actions were inspired by the hatred towards Confederate symbols or namely towards Governor Stockdale.

Nevertheless, this incident perfectly illustrates how liberal propaganda influences even on Southern people.

The names of dignified Southern politicians and warriors should not be blurred out by Washington. These people played a huge role in American history; they fought for their beliefs and earned people's respect.

It is absolutely unpatriotic now to demonize their names! We should protect our history and fight against liberal brainwashing.
